Vigilant Wealth Management (“Vigilant”) is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission as an investment adviser and, as such, provides investment advisory services. Investment advisory and brokerage services and fees differ; it is important for retail investors to understand the differences. There are free and simple tools available to research firms and financial professionals at Investor.gov/CRS, which also provides educational materials about broker-dealers, investment advisers, and investing.

What investment services and advice can you provide me?

Vigilant is a private company specializing in offering discretionary investment management and coordinated financial planning services to high-net-worth retail investors (individuals and families). Vigilant manages client accounts on a discretionary basis, which means that Vigilant has the authority to make investment decisions on behalf of a client in alignment with a client’s investment objectives as detailed in a client’s statement of investment objectives. Financial planning services may not be appropriate for everyone and will be provided at Vigilant’s discretion. Planning may include reporting, advice, and guidance in areas such as retirement, cash flow, estate, tax, insurance, debt financing, and charitable giving. When Vigilant provides financial-planning services it relies upon information provided by the client, or the client’s advisors, and does not automatically verify information in every scenario while providing this service. Vigilant does not have proprietary products and is not limited to a certain group or type of investment. More detailed information about Vigilant’s services can be found in its Form ADV Part 2A (Items 4 and 7).

What fees will I pay?

Vigilant charges an investment adviser fee based upon the amount of assets managed for each client. Multiple client accounts and related family accounts are aggregated to determine the fee rate. A higher amount of assets managed by Vigilant generally results in a lower fee rate. Fees are calculated by Vigilant as of the last business day of each month based upon the daily average market value of each client’s account during that month; fees are deducted by the custodian each month from the designated client account. Clients of Vigilant may be required to pay other third-party fees and costs such as custody fees, transaction charges, and fees charged by mutual funds or exchange traded funds. In most instances, a higher value account will pay a greater amount of fees; accordingly, Vigilant has an incentive to encourage a client to add assets to an account. For a more complete outline and description of fees and costs refer to Vigilant’s Form ADV Part 2A (Item 5).

You will pay fees and cost whether you make or lose money on your investments. Fees and costs will reduce any amount of money you make on your investments over time. Please make sure you understand what fees and costs you are paying.

What are your legal obligations to me when acting as my investment adviser? How else does your firm make money and what conflicts of interest do you have?

When we act as your investment adviser, we do so in the capacity of a fiduciary; accordingly, we act in your best interest and do not put our interests ahead of yours. There is an important distinction between advisers who serve as Fiduciaries and those who do not. Please ask us about the differences. At the same time, the way we make money creates certain conflicts with your interests. You should understand and ask us about these conflicts because they can affect the investment advice we provide you. For example, we may recommend you increase your assets managed by Vigilant. This typically will result in a higher amount of fees paid to Vigilant. For additional information on conflicts of interest and compensation, please refer to Vigilant’s Form ADV Part 2A (Items 5, 12 and 14).

How do your financial professionals make money?

In addition to salary and benefits, Vigilant professionals are entitled to receive variable compensation from Vigilant for maintaining existing and generating new clients. Variable compensation is generally based upon the amount of client assets for which a professional is responsible. Professionals who generate new clients receive compensation based upon the amount of new investment assets. Financial professionals have a financial incentive to encourage clients to add assets to accounts or become clients of Vigilant.

Do you or your financial professionals have legal or disciplinary history?

“No”. You can visit Investor.gov/CRS for a free and simple search tool to research Vigilant and a Vigilant professional(s).
